Dr. Joseph F. Pollack

(Served EMU over 12 years)

Dr. Joseph F. Pollack served Eastern Michigan University from 1997 – 2009 as director of the Charter Schools Office. In this position, he oversaw the establishment of eight charter schools located in southeast Michigan. Under his leadership, these schools have become models of educational success in their communities. Dr. Pollack believed that charter schools offered “high quality” educational options to those of modest means. He was instrumental in the formation of the Michigan Council of Charter School Authorizers (The Council) as a means of strengthening charter schools and their oversight. In addition, Dr. Pollack held leadership positions with various state and national organizations whose focus is on improving the educational outcomes of all public school students. In recognition of his contributions to education, one of our charter schools has recently changed its name to the “Dr. Joseph F. Pollack Academic Center of Excellence.”
