Eastern Michigan University's Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminology invites applications for a tenure-track position at the Assistant Professor Level, beginning Fall 2009. We seek candidates with expertise and research agendas in sociology of family. The successful candidate will be prepared to teach courses that support our major program offerings in sociology, including the applied concentrations, at both the graduate and undergraduate levels, as well as contribute to the University's mission on interdisciplinary and/or global initiatives. Qualifications also include a Ph.D. in Sociology by August 31, 2009.

The Department, which comprises 20 full-time faculty members, offers Bachelor's and Master's Degrees in Sociology, including several concentrations in the area of family. It also offers Bachelor's and Master's Degrees in Criminology/Criminal Justice and Bachelor's degrees in Anthropology. The department is noted for excellent teaching, a strong research program, and outreach activities within the Southeastern Michigan community. See the EMU Web site at www.emich.edu.

Eastern Michigan University serves nearly 23,000 students and has been named by US News as one of the most diverse public institutions in the Midwest. It is located in the culturally diverse and intellectually stimulating community at the intersection of the Detroit and Ann Arbor metropolitan areas. We offer an excellent salary/benefits package. To apply for this position, please send a letter of application, a detailed vita, and three letters of reference, electronically to: academic_hr@emich.edu. Please make sure to include Posting #F0937 in the subject line and send attachments only. Do not type in the body of the email. Review of applications will begin on November 10, 2008 and will continue until a suitable candidate is identified. For more information, contact Robert M. Orrange, Search Committee Chair, rorrange@emich.edu
