ARTH 267: HISTORY OF ASIAN ART

Tues/Thurs 12:30-1:45pm

CRN: 11404

Ford 107

This course explores the traditional and contemporary artistic traditions of Asia. We will focus principally on the art of South Asia (India, Pakistan), China, and Japan, but also examine the surrounding cultures of Korea, Himalaya (Nepal, Tibet), Southeast Asia, and Central Asia (locations along the ancient Silk Road).

We will emphasize the historical interrelationships between the cultures and societies in these different regions and how artistic traditions both responded to their own contexts and were shaped by these encounters

ARTH 267 satisfies the General Education requirement for the Arts category in Knowledge of the Disciplines (GEKA)

ARTH 267 also fulfills requirements in Art & Design majors and minors, including the BFAs in studio art and visual arts education, BA in studio art, and BA in art history.

ARTH 263:

Survey of Western Art II

CRN: 10953

Mon/Wed 9:30-10:45am
107 Ford Hall

Professor Pamela Stewart
pstewa13@emich.edu

Course Description:

This course introduces the fundamental principles and canonical works of Western art history from the Renaissance to the turn of the twentieth century. We will explore major themes such as the changing status of the artist, patronage and the art market, and the impact of religion, politics, science and technology on art production. You will learn to critically analyze works of art while contextualizing them historically with respect to significant periods and ideas.

ARTH 263 fulfills program requirements in the BFA and BA in studio art, the BFA in Visual Art Education, the BA in art history, and the art history and art minors

ARTH 161: Survey of Non-Western Art (GEKA, GEGA)

CRN: 10992 and 10993

Online and asynchronous in Fall 2025

Explore the world through images! This online, asynchronous course provides an introductory historical survey of the visual arts and architecture of the rich cultures around the globe not directly linked to the artistic traditions of Western (European) civilization. Artworks by the indigenous inhabitants of Africa, Oceania, Asia and the Americas are examined for their historical and cultural significance. Each of the eleven course units covers a particular region in the Non-Western world. Both mainstream and non-traditional art will be considered.

ARTH 161 satisfies the General Education requirement for the Arts category in Knowledge of the Disciplines (GEKA) and/or and Global Awareness (GEGA).

ARTH 161 also fulfills requirements within Art & Design majors and minors, including the BFAs in studio art and visual arts education, BA in studio art, and BA in art history.

All are welcome – NO prior experience is needed!

Tuesday/Thursday 2:00-3:15pm
107 Ford Hall

This course is the first half of the introductory art history sequence and covers the visual arts from Prehistoric times through the Late Middle Ages. For each of these periods we will examine the major trends and developments in the visual arts and the contexts in which artworks were created. We will also set these artworks, monuments, and civilizations in a global context to consider connections across cultures.

ARTH 162 satisfies the General Education requirement for the Arts category in Knowledge of the Disciplines (GEKA)

ARTH 162 also fulfills requirements within Art & Design majors and minors, including the BFAs in studio art and visual arts education, BA in studio art, and BA in art history.

All are welcome – NO prior experience is needed!

Course Description:

This course examines the relationships between artistic change and social change in the United States since the 1950s and 1960s.

The course introduces students to the work of recent artists reflecting a range of cultural identities. It invites students to explore the values and points of view expressed in contemporary works of art, and to recognize and articulate their own responses to and perspectives on those works. It teaches students to understand contemporary art in relation to transformations within the social and economic systems of art and in relation to broader processes of contestation and social change.

Baroque Art (ARTH 469/569)

Mon/Wed 11am-12:15pm

CRN: 12648/12649

Caravaggio the rebel, Bernini the showman, Rubens the entrepreneur, and Rembrandt the magician...

The seventeenth century was a period of immense political, economic, social, religious, and cultural transformation. This course explores the ways in which artists and architects responded to these forces, and the ways in which their art helped to inflect the culture of their time.

Visual images will provide a lens for us to investigate larger cultural developments including the Protestant and Catholic Reformations, the Scientific Revolution, the rise of absolutism, and colonial expansion in the New World. We will consider the artist's professional education and practice, the rise of the art market, and developing theories of artistic originality and creation. Through a close engagement with Baroque visual culture, students will develop competencies in visual literacy, critical reading, and written and oral communication.

This class fulfills program requirements in Art History, Studio Art (BFA, BA, MFA), and is an approved elective in Religious Studies

ARTH 100: Art Appreciation (GEKA)

This course provides an introduction to visual culture: from works of fine art in museums to the built environment and the mass media images that saturate our daily lives. You will learn to interpret what you see and understand the vital role(s) that art has played in expressing—and shaping—cultural values, philosophies, beliefs, and identities.

We will highlight historical contexts, cultural influences, formal aspects of various forms of art, as well as critical thinking and appreciation for art and design. Although the foundation of this course is art history, it also includes elements of art criticism, object analysis, aesthetics, and experiential learning.

This Gen-Ed class is designed for learners of any level of knowledge and experience with the arts.

ARTH 100 fulfills the Gen-Ed requirement in Knowledge of the Arts (GEKA)

Class Description

Digital Fabrication is a beginner course offering students the opportunity to experiment with new tools and materials to build on their discipline-specific art practice. Students in all areas of concentration (2D, 3D, Photography/New Media, Graphic Design, and Animation & Gaming) are eligible to register for this course. The class will introduce students to a variety of techniques using 3D printers, 3D scanners, laser cutters, CNC milling machines, vacuum forming machines, and more.

Course Objectives

- Introduce alternative ways of thinking about art production
- Experiment with a variety of cutting-edge digital fabrication techniques
- Combine technology with traditional art practices to develop new methods of making

Location

*This class will be offered in the new Digital Fabrication Lab located in the Windgate Arts Complex. Exciting times.
