

The College of Health and Human Services
Interprofessional Education (IPE)
Faculty Scholars Program

IPE aims to encourage different professionals and pre-professionals to meet and interact in learning to improve collaborative practice and the health care and well being of patients/clients. The Faculty Scholars Program creates an intentional venue for peer learning about IPE. Together, the Scholars will receive training about the integration of IPE into existing curricula, and subsequently they will work collaboratively to design IPE learning experiences for students within and among their disciplines.

If accepted as an IPE Faculty Scholar, you will:

Participate in a 3-day Summer IPE Faculty Development Workshop (July 23rd, 24th & 25th)

Receive a one-course release for Fall 2018

Participate in a weekly, semester-long seminar of sharing, exploring, planning and implementing IPE initiatives (Fall 2018)

Receive a $500 stipend

The Office for the Advancement of Interprofessional Education and Research provides support for faculty, staff, and administrators to plan, implement, and assess IPE initiatives within the College of Health and Human Services. The Office also helps to identify and/or provide funding opportunities for faculty research and creative activity in IPE, engaged classroom/curriculum initiatives, and community outreach.

Complete the application and send it to:

Dr. Christine Karshin
304 Marshall Building
ckarshin@emich.edu

Applications will be reviewed by the IPE Steering Committee

Deadline for receipt of this application is February 12th.
