

Rhonda Longworth, Ph.D.

Dr. Longworth earned her Ph.D. in political science from the University of Iowa in 1996 and a Bachelor of Arts degree, with a double major in political science and history. She currently is a Professor in Political Science at Eastern Michigan University. Her research and teaching interests have focused on the determinants of successful executive leadership, particularly in electoral and legislative arenas and the politics of gender. She is the coauthor of the book "Framing Sarah Palin: Pit Bulls, Puritans and Politics" that analyzes partisan and gender narrative frames in American electoral politics.

She has served EMU in a number of administrative roles including: Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic and Student Affairs (I) (currently) and Associate Provost and Associate VP for Academic Programming and Services where she led the University's retention and graduation improvement planning efforts. She has also served as Women's Studies Director; Department Head, Political Science; Assistant VP of Academic Affairs (I); Assistant VP of Academic Human Resources and Divisional Budget (I); Director of Course and Program Development; and Professor, Political Science.
