

The Bureau of Human Resources is pleased to announce the launch of two agency-wide fellowships that are designed to bring young talent into the U.S. Department of State.

The Civil Service Science, Technology, Engineering, Math (STEM) Fellowship Program was designed to bring talent into the global technical environment. The program is open to individuals who, at the time of application, will have completed their formal education in one of the identified STEM disciplines. The application period will open on January 23, 2017.

The Civil Service Foreign Affairs Fellowship Program was designed to bring talent into the Department's foreign affairs ranks. The fellowship is open to individuals whose educational background meets the basic requirement for the Foreign Affairs occupation. The application period will open on February 6, 2017.

There are seven bureaus participating in the Fellowships, 15 different occupations for applicants to choose from, and over 50 positions available.

Visit Civil Service STEM and Foreign Affairs Fellowships to learn more and sign up under Keep Me Informed to receive a notification when the application period begins.