

With the support of our community, The Engineering Society of Detroit creates future engineering leaders in Michigan.

Jeff Presbie's story illustrates how ESD impacts lives. As Jeff explains:

“ESD turned my life around. Life threw a lot of tragedy my way since I started college, and I struggled a lot. I was afraid I wasn't going to find an internship before it was to graduate. Then ESD started a student chapter at my school, and I talked with them about my situation. Not only did they get me an internship at Magna, I had the opportunity to help start up a brand new facility. I'm proud to say I work there full time now. I really owe a lot to this organization, and as a leader of the ESD Chapter at EMU, I'm dedicated to paying it forward.”

Jeff is a full-time Eastern Michigan University student. He also works full-time as an Operations Associate at Cosma Body Assembly Michigan, a division of Magna International. And he serves as secretary of the ESD Student Chapter at Eastern Michigan University.

Each year ESD reaches out to ask those who care about engineering in our state to invest in future engineers like Jeff.
