

"I took this photo while I was exploring the ancient city of Norba, Italy. My intentions while taking this photo were quite simple; to capture the architecture used by the people who once lived in this ancient city. However, looking back at it, I see much more. This photo helps me remember that although there may be times that I see my walk through life as limited and restricted, opportunities to grow are awaiting me up ahead. There are always opportunities that lie beyond any horizon I can see."
