Becoming Earthbound:

Jewish Thought in an
Age of Climate Change

Professor Mara Benjamin

Monday, Feb. 13, 2023 — 7 pm
EMU Student Center Auditorium
900 Oakwood, Ypsilanti, Mich.

As the reality of climate change becomes ever more pressing, many Jews have turned to classical texts to ground their ecological activism. How do modern and contemporary Jewish thinkers understand the legacy of Jewish texts and traditions? How can theology enable us to address the deeper questions prompted by climate change about what it means to be an earthly creature? Join Professor Mara Benjamin (Mt. Holyoke College) for a presentation examining these important questions.

If you are attending virtually, please register using the QR code or the link tinyurl.com/EMUJewishStudies. No cost to attend. For questions, contact Robert Erlewine at jewish.studies@emich.edu

This presentation is co-sponsored by the Environmental Science and Society Program at EMU, The Dayenu Circle at Temple Beth Emeth, The Green Team at Beth Israel Congregation, and Hazon Detroit.
