PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Madam Chair and Distinguished Members of the Board of Regents:

The higher education environment is as challenged as it has ever been in my 14 years as a university president, of course the last seven of which have been here at Eastern. The challenges are many: the declining population of high school students; the reduction in the number of graduating high schoolers who choose to pursue a degree; funding challenges on the state level; and, a variety of other factors.

This new landscape for higher education and the budgetary challenges it has created impacts the work all of us who have dedicated our lives to in preparing students for future careers, as well as the livelihood of those employed at universities across the country.

Institutions must become more nimble, creative and innovative than ever to identify new sources of revenue to invest in student and employee success.

This is why Eastern, as approved by our Board of Regents a short time ago, is entering into an innovative utilities and infrastructure partnership, Eagle Energy Partners. This pioneering initiative will deliver significant and sustainable enhancements to the overall campus experience for students, faculty and staff, and will benefit the University immediately and for decades in the future.

The partnership will generate a multi-million-dollar influx of outside funds to the University to:

- Further support Eastern's strong sustainability efforts and energy conservation measures, while making the University even more "green";
- Provide immediate and long-term solutions to deferred maintenance of older buildings and modernize the aging utility infrastructure; and,
- Create a continuous income stream to support academic programs and strategic enrollment and retention initiatives. The plan also establishes a distinctive opportunity for students, faculty and staff to develop projects to support enrollment and retention objectives.

The partnership is the first of its kind among Michigan public universities, and among only a handful that have been formed across the country at universities such as Ohio State, Georgetown and the University of Idaho.

Comprehensive details about the new partnership can be found on the website emich.edu/energy. I encourage you to visit the site to learn more, read the FAQ and other important information about how this initiative will support EMU and our students, faculty and staff for decades to come.

Speaking of great news, we have two important events following this meeting that I encourage you to attend.

At 3 p.m., we will host a reception in recognition of Professor of Political Science Barbara Patrick. Dr. Patrick is the newly named recipient of the Distinguished Woman in Higher Education Leadership Award by the Michigan American Council on Education Women's Network – known as Michigan ACE. We hope you can join us across the hallway in room 205.

At 4 p.m., as you heard earlier, we will host a groundbreaking event for the new Windgate Arts Complex on the north side of campus. Our sincere thank you to the driving force behind this initiative, Director of the School of Art and Design, Professor Sandra Murchison.

As I conclude, there are two important items to note.

Please join me in celebrating the success of the Forensics team, which earned second place in a national competition last weekend. Gavin Millard, a sophomore majoring in public relations, was named national champion in dramatic interpretation, becoming Eastern's first national champion in this category.

On Sunday, August 30, we will honor 1,900 new graduates. Commencement ceremonies are always the highlight of the academic year and I look forward to joining many of you as we celebrate the class of 2023!

Additional information and accomplishments are listed in the appendix to this report on the University's website.

Thank you, Chair Jeffries.
James M. Smith, Ph.D.
President
